PREFACE

This Queensland extension to the Australian Standard Offence Classification has been developed by the Office of the Government Statistician for use by criminal justice agencies in Queensland.

The national classification was developed by the Australian Bureau of Statistics. The Queensland extension provides a greater level of detail in certain parts of the classification. It is intended for use in the collection and publication of crime and justice statistics by Queensland agencies.

Development of the Queensland extension has been a joint project involving key criminal justice agencies, namely the Queensland Police Service, the Department of Justice and Attorney-General, the Department of Corrective Services and the Department of Families, Youth and Community Care. The participation and assistance of these agencies is acknowledged. The assistance of the Australian Bureau of Statistics is also acknowledged as is their permission to release this publication.

Changes to the Queensland extension will be made in response to changes to the national classification and when required by Queensland agencies.

Introduction to the Australian Standard Offence Classification (Queensland extension)

Background
The Australian Standard Offence Classification (ASOC) provides a uniform national statistical framework for classifying offences for use by criminal justice agencies in Australia. It was developed by the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) in consultation with criminal justice agencies and was released in 1997 (ABS Cat. no. 1234.0).

The Queensland extension
As part of the process of implementing ASOC, Queensland agencies have developed an extended version of the classification. This has been done to allow a number of distinctions to be made which are considered important by Queensland agencies.

The Queensland extension adds a fourth level to the three-level national classification. In addition to the levels of division, subdivision and group, the Queensland version contains a subgroup level. The code at this level is the four-digit group code with a fifth digit appended.

For groups which were not subdivided, the subgroup name is the same as that of the group and the fifth digit is a 1. Residual subgroups have codes ending in 9 and most have ‘(remainder)’ in the name.

This document
This document follows the national classification in content and layout. The structure of the classification shows the divisions, subdivisions and groups as given in the national classification (and amended by the March 1999 corrigendum) as well as the subgroups of the Queensland extension.

The definitions (and lists of inclusions and exclusions) for the divisions, subdivisions and groups are reproduced from the national standard and appear in the left-hand column. Definitions (and lists of inclusions and exclusions) for the subgroups appear in the right-hand column.

The alphabetical index gives the appropriate subgroup code for offences described in words. It includes additional entries not given in the national publication. The numerical index contains the same information in order of QASOC code.

Supplementary codes
When the data provided are inadequate to allow a five-digit subgroup to be allocated, a supplementary code may be applied. Supplementary codes may be generated by taking a four-digit group code and adding a single zero to it to make a five-digit code.

In any instances where a group cannot be selected, the most suitable subdivision (or division) is selected and two (or three) zeroes are appended to its code to make a five-digit code.

The name used for these supplementary codes is the name of the group (or subdivision or division) followed by ‘not further defined’.

If the data provided cannot be assigned to any ASOC division, then the five-digit code of 99991 can be used. If no data at all are provided, then the five-digit code of 99981 can be used. These codes correspond to the four-digit codes (9999 and 9998 respectively) given in the national classification.
Further information

The explanatory notes included in the national publication and the coding guidelines issued by ABS in May 1999 also apply to the Queensland extension.
